"Painting the figure in the landscape has always been problematic. This workshop will explore proven classical and contemporary ideas and techniques that address the relationship of the figure in architectural and landscape settings. The sessions will challenge the artist to 'think outside the box' regarding composition and painting. Learn how compositional devices such as geometry and perspective are used to create mood, direction, simplicity and complexity. Whether an abstract or realist painter, introducing the figure into the landscape calls for strong visual relationships in order to create good story-telling."...Brent Lynch
