Artist Statement

Every day, we must ask different people different questions, explore sources, and gather diverse experiences to shape ourselves and discover our own truths. We decide whether to make things visible or keep them hidden.

Making decisions means never truly knowing where they will lead. How will the other person react or respond? What's behind the curtain? What will happen, if I press this button? Am I responding to this impulse? Am I making contact?

I ask myself: Can we control the decisions we make? And do we have the courage to face the consequences? Are we off track? Failing? Starting over?

At the heart of my paintings lies a triangle: a point in time, a place, and an emotion. To me, life is a series of encounters. Each place, each decision, each person becomes exactly what they are because of a unique chain of events. But the most fascinating moments are when you encounter yourself. You stumble upon a question you've once asked, a memory, a feeling, or an unexpected impulse.

Everyday situations and objects fascinate me. Diversity, observation, and research drive me. Switches, keyholes, LEDs, and loudspeakers, stripped of their original functionality and location, are the motifs of my RESET series. I understand them as symbols of active decision-making processes. Confronting and encountering—my works is pleasantly uncomfortable. It radiates depth and calm. Through their size and technique of painterly representation, they invite the automatic desire to touch.

Getting up close and personal, consciously engaging with what I am doing now or what I will be doing next. It is my goal to offer space for mental „what-if“ scenarios to unfold. Personally. Directly. Emotionally. Consciously. In touch with the self and humanity.

BIO

Janine Seelen is a painter with a career in the art and design world. After completing her graphic design studies in Germany, she moved to the USA and worked in New York and San Francisco for renowned companies, agencies, and publishers. In 1995, she founded her first graphic design studio in New York with a partner. In 2000, she returned to her hometown of Hamburg and continued her interdisciplinary graphic design work there. She provided practical training to many junior designers after their studies and placed them with renowned publishers and agencies. Since 2019, Seelen has worked exclusively as a freelance artist with exhibitions in Hamburg, Berlin, Cologne, Frankfurt, Karlsruhe, Salzburg, and the USA. Janine Seelen lives and works in Hamburg.
